

Your Donor Impact

Because you give for kids

Your AAP donations lift communities back up.

When kids, parents and our members are hit by disasters, your support is there.

Your generous giving has been a remedy in dire situations. Your support helps things get better. Tornadoes hitting Alabama and Missouri. Superstorm Sandy's aftermath on the East Coast. Louisiana and Mississippi fighting to recover from Hurricane Katrina. Flint, Puerto Rico, Parkland. Events like these bring communities to their knees.

When things feel desperate, your contributions give hope.

Pediatricians are a crucial part of the rebuilding and recovery process for children and their families. Providing essential lifelines could not be done without your assistance. AAP donations have been used to provide medical supplies, and equipment, and important educational materials. Support has come in other forms as well, ranging from professional training on trauma, stress and resiliency to psycho-educational support groups. Your donations are there when needed most. You can feel comfort knowing that you've helped quell despair and fear.

Unfortunately, community-crippling situations never cease. Earthquakes. Flooding. Large acts of violence. The needs are many. And now, COVID-19 has added another challenge to the list. COVID is a daunting problem in its own right, which only magnifies the impact of other disasters as they strike.

In response, AAP is there. Thanks to you. You helped build the AAP Disaster Recovery Fund as a reliable pillar of philanthropy. Your donations provide vital care and resources for our members and their communities. Thank you for making this incredible support happen.

See you next month for another story of what your AAP gifts mean to kids, their families and pediatricians.

Gratefully yours,
